Daily Reflection
Channeled speaking from the Divine Mother

Daily Reflection with the Divine Mother

I am your Divine Mother and I flow forth within this speaking to embrace you with not only love, but to also speak truth that you might be relieved of your concerns for what is called upcoming times.

While there are many who will speak of grave events and the tumbling of earthly formings, and while there are those who would speak of the ending of living as you know it to be, and while there are those who would attempt to instill fear within your heart; I am your Divine Mother and I say these words to you: there is nothing to fear, my children.

I have not breathed you forth only to have the life that you have journeyed within ended by grave catastrophes. Neither have your efforts in opening and expanding your own understanding of truth been in vain. And though you may have many questions or wonderings, hear these words... for they are spoken to your hungry heart.

Long ago you did journey to earth. You have heard those words many times. Yet do you recognize what they are saying?

You have known of this journey long before you entered this lifetime. You — all who receive these words — have known of this moment, of the upcoming moments, and of the turning of the patterns and encodings that hold the structure of life as you know it.

And even before you decided to enter this journey of great change, you knew... you knew that this time, within which you currently reside, would be one of fulfillment, of the crumbing of untruths and the embracing of the heart of that which is called One Heart.

You knew that there would be those ones who would try to hold on to the olde ways, try to contain the ever-expanding truth; and you also knew that their attempts would be for naught.

You saw, as you viewed the Time Stream stretched before you, that there would be great explosions of light. You saw Truth birthed within the hearts and spirits of those who had been long waiting for relief from the distortion and illusion.

And, my children, you felt within your own spirit that desire to participate, to dance within the celebration of change and more so, to embrace those who reached their hands out from the density. Do you see?

You all determined that you would not only be present for this great event, but that you would reach your spirit forth to embrace those who were emerging from the dust, that you would love their courage, and that you would see them awakened and dancing the same dance, one of freedom... one of love... one of wholeness of being.

And now the time is upon you, my children. The great changes are occurring even as you receive these words. And what are the changes?

Within your being, there builds that yearning and excitement. You may not know where to put that excitement; you may not know why you are feeling hope-fulfilled when the cause and effect of your day seems to be the same. Yet it is not. Your day changes even in this moment.

Where there has been despair, you are now able to easily allow difficulties to be redefined. You have an inner knowing that you will be able to go forth, where in the past you had fallen to your knees because you were overwhelmed by the challenges that the distortion and illusion perpetrated upon all who resided in physicality. You know, within your entire being, that you will never again be challenged in a way that will bring you to your knees. Why? How do you know?

Yet you do know, do you not? Yes. You can feel the change within your own being. Your mind or your thoughts might try to cause you to continue to feel fear, to feel despair... yet there is something within you that has stirred... and you know that the fear and despair is a false response to anything that flows forth within this journey of great change.

You have the words, the struggle is over. It is over, my children. Does this mean that there will no longer be difficulties? It means that any difficulty that comes to you will be easily understood and changed. How? By your expanded consciousness, by your changed encodings, and by your loving heart which has given up the battle only to embrace Truth ever more.

I am your Divine Mother and I speak these words as deep love for that which you are. As we began, Long ago you came to earth... yet before you did come to earth, you did reside within my Heart of hearts and therein did we speak of these times and of the love that would flow forth, freely, to be expressed in all manners.

My Children, even in this moment, do I ask of you to pause and to feel... feel that which resides within you, within the very core of your spirit... beyond that which you have experienced and before the next breath... you are glorious beings and it is Truth, Love and Peace that reside within the fabric of your being. You are this and much more... yet you are Truth, you are Love, you are Peace, you are the Wholeness of Being, and you are that of me and I of you.

Breathe deeply and feel the fulfillment of your reasons for journeying forth, for choosing to reside in this moment; breathe deeply and know that all is well, that this change is most wondrous... even when the external world wants so very much for you to believe differently. You know. You know.

Until we speak again, my children, remember that your Divine Mother loves everything about you... everything... even that which you have hidden from view... I do love that part of you... because it is of you. You are loved beyond the speaking of these words.
