

January 1, 2013

Celebrating Truth with Merlin!

Well now, here we are at a time when most of you are celebrating the beginning of a new year, the year two thousand and thirteen. And while for some it is a year of beginnings, for the majority of those who will receive these words, it is a year of celebrating completions.

Does this mean that you will spend the entire year completing? No, my dears. It means that you can — as you have the word — finally celebrate the total completion of all that you have worked so very hard to release, change or complete during the previous year. It was during the year two thousand and twelve that you recognized — much to your credit — that you were not going to begin that for which you have longed; but more so, that you were right in the middle of completing, completing at very deep levels that which you had been residing in for lifetimes.

And also much to your credit, my dears, you were in the midst of discovering that as long as you held on to the dreams that were created within those previous patterns, beliefs and yearnings, you would continue to reside in the olde ways. And, yes, you rebelled, many of you. Why? Here were your thoughts, your reasonings:

You had worked very hard to develop a way, a plan that would give to you fulfillment. You had envisioned, you had focused, and you had determined your success within this plan. And now you were asked — by your very own inner knowing — to let go of these plans? You rebelled. You cried. You interpreted this inner asking to be one of grave disappointments, one in which you were to be once again forlorn in your dreams unfulfilled.

You thought or interpreted this asking to let go of everything, even of your dreams, that the Universe had somehow failed you... and that it did, brought you to a loneliness within your own spirit. How could this be? Yes, you were seemingly lessened within your own beingness.

And now I will tell you why all of this occurred, my dears; why all of these thoughts came to you, why all of the despair or hints of despair dared to enter your light-filled consciousness.

Hear these words, my dears, hear these words. As long as you reside within the beliefs and patterns, the dreams and plans of olde, you will reside within unfulfillment. Why? The olde, so to speak, is complete. You recognized the completions. Some of you celebrated the knowing of completions. And as I have spoken, you delved into the patterns of the past and discovered where they resided within your own consciousness, and you then released them... to the best of your ability.

What you have not quite recognized until this moment is the truth that the dreams that you allowed to come to your consciousness while residing within those plans are dreams from the olde ways, dreams at times in reaction to the olde ways that held you within unfulfillment, and dreams that dared to give you some hope for a future of ease, peace, love and deep inner sighs.

Yet perhaps you will receive [read] those words again? You see, my dears, while you were dreaming, while you were receiving your inner yearning for the more that you knew existed somewhere, somehow; you were still residing in the olde, in the olde patterns, the olde residue of what was, and in the completing. And perhaps rightly so, you believed that you could release all of that which you were completing, while holding on to the dreams, the plans for the future and for future's fulfillment. Yet I am here to tell you that you cannot. Why?

The dreams of the past, the plans for future fulfillment all made within the olde ways, within that which you were successfully letting go, releasing; those dreams and plans belong right there, in the past.

And I am not without compassion, my dear friends. I easily recognize that you have held on to those dreams, on to those plans. Yet hear my words!

All dreams made in this manner are lesser than the fulfillment that awaits you! And while it is true that you certainly in this moment have no idea of the nature of the forming of your fulfillment, you can all feel its approaching. And yes, while you have felt fulfillment approaching in the past, and while your fulfillment seemed to pass you by, and while you — what you call in your slang vocabulary — made the best of it all, trying to see the positive in a less-than fulfilling conclusion to your efforts, the truth remains that you have never experienced that which awaits you.

Then what am I asking of you during his speaking? Oh my dears, I am asking you to dare. I am asking you to dare to let go of all of your plans. I am asking you to let go of all of your dreams. I am asking you to give yourself this moment to fully birth... birth without the baggage of the past, even though some of that baggage gives the impression that it is light-filled and promising great gifts.

I am asking you to fully emerge from what was, to fully emerge from that which you have resided within, and to fully emerge from the journey that you created for yourself, for your future journeys. I am asking you to let go of the envisioned future through which you might experience your own fulfillment. And, my dears, I am asking you to reside within this one moment and herein to allow... yes, to allow. Allow what?

Well, firstly lets talk about what allowing is all about. You see, within your very being there are those glorious patterns and frequencies that resonate with the consciousness which you are now incarnating. And those frequencies and encodings, now activated by your beautiful ever-expanding consciousness, are just waiting to flow forth... and what?

Those frequencies are just waiting to flow forth, unhampered by your interpretations of what would give to you fulfillment. Those frequencies are just waiting to flow forth to give to you the path upon which your steps will become a dance, your dance of fulfillment, of joy, of delight, of peace, of celebration... celebration that finally... yes, finally that which you had dreamed, that which you had intuited, that which you had known somehow long ago, that which you dared to believe existed even when you were struggling in survival... not only exists but is ready for your presence. Now.

And when you allow, my dears, you are letting go of your control, your control of what appears before you. You are letting go of more, my dears. You are letting go of your fears. And though you may believe that you have been complete with those fears, the truth remains that when you declare statements like this or something better, or for my highest good, or the highest vibration of light comes to me now and all else be gone, or any other statement in this manner, you are making those statements against fear, fear of what might occur.

And while in the past, such statements were necessary, you discovered; I am here to tell you that now, while you maintain your expanded consciousness, while you allow your inner patterns and encodings to flow forth to create for you that pathway of total fulfillment, then you no longer need those statements.

And you might be thinking, what about the forces that are currently residing upon earth? What about the negativity that has in the past depleted my energies? What about the confusion? What about the survival that bleeds through to me even when I am just walking in joy? What about what seems to be growing "out there", that which I do not want to be part of? What about that, Merlin???

And I say to you, my dear friends, my dear light-filled adventurers: When you awaken each morn, remember who you are. Remember. Remember that you are a glorious light being who has completed many journeys, who has transformed old ways into new awakenings, and who has released the past and all that resided therein.

Remember that you are free. Remember that you are free from that which haunted you. Remember that you are no longer subject to those vibrations that reside within survival.

Fear not! Fear not, my dears The past is gone. The olde survival's ways that used to come nipping at your heels, can be no more within the presence of your being.

You are the forerunners! You are the light beings who are anchoring truth, great expanded inner knowing of truth, incarnate. You are bringing into physicality the great truths, you are holding those vibrational frequencies whilst you are maintaining your own physical incarnating. This is what you could say no minor accomplishment.! This is major!

You are a band of light warriors who succeed even before the battle begins. Why? My dears, there is no energy or frequency that can disturb the totality of being. There is no energy or frequency that can lessen the All That Is.

Do you see? You are now... you ARE now the All That Is consciously incarnating within physicality, residing in the fullness of being. Why ? That all else Return to One.

You are the beacon of light that calls all darkness to it. And the darkness cannot diminish your light. Those days are long gone. Those days are past. Those days reside within that which you released, within that which you completed, within that which you dared to face and discover the lesser of that which you are, that which you dared to embrace and release the reasons for experiencing yourself as lesser than who you really are.

This is the new day. Right now. And allowing means that you are basking in the light of that which is, in the light of that which you are, and in the light of the Return to One. Even those who struggle against the strong current of the Return to One cannot hold themselves back. They believe they are losing grasp, that they will be no more. But you and I know that they are in the midst of becoming who they really are.

And what do you do about all of that when you see someone or recognize that those who once held control over the masses are now losing control and going mad? You love them, my dears. They are the shadows of who you have been. And you allow. You allow them to seemingly fall down, to reside in the despair of having to let go of that which they created as a fulfillment of their created journey. You allow them to fail. You allow them to cry. You allow them to wail. Why?

It is the sound of the ending of survival's grasp. It is the sound of the ending of pain and suffering for the masses. And even though the masses believe that they are stuck within their own suffering, you know... now you know that they are in the midst of the dissolving of the beast of survival. Now you know that you are recognizing the demonstration of your fulfillment of purpose.

Survival and suffering cannot maintain itself in the face of Truth, of Love, of Light of Lights, or in the face of the All That Is fully incarnate, consciously knowing of that which it is. Yes, my dears, this is the moment of truth. And you are allowing it to occur. Allowing.

And what occurs? The beginning of great living. The beginning of delight, of joy, of that for which your previous self yearned. Just a little here and a little there. Recognize your pockets of delight, my dears. You needn't hold on to them lest they disappear. Your delight will now only grow and become fulfillment... if you let it, if you allow it to be made manifest.

Ah! Now I believe you do see, you do understand, and more so, you know. You know that your new manner of living has arrived. You know that you cannot make it be lesser than what it is by trying to make it bend to your desires. And soon those desires will also dissolve... because they have been created within your being upon the wishes and dreams of the past.

And for a moment you might feel as though you have no place to go, nothing to do, nothing to accomplish. And in that moment, cherish the knowing that you are... in that moment... fully awake to your own incarnating. And allow, my dears, allow that moment to live within your consciousness.

Does that mean that you will no longer do, no longer go forth? Of course not. It does mean that you will be able to easily, more and more easily, discern which actions or inactions are birthed from your deep inner knowing of truth.

And while your human nature might beg you to do something, anything, that will produce fulfillment; your entire inner knowing loves that human nature and says to it, “I am here now. I am expanded consciousness. I will take care of everything.” And then you will perhaps breathe deeply and celebrate the moment, this moment. Right now. This moment called eternity.

My dears, you were not only meant for greatness, you are the greatness itself. You were not only meant to be joyful, you are the joy itself. You are the peace itself. You are the fulfillment itself. All of those patterns reside within your totality of being and are just waiting to flow forth to demonstrate truth incarnate. Yes, my dears, you might say that you have finally arrived.

Ah, yes! Until we speak again, I am your friend Merlin!

For More of Merlin's Guidance and Teachings, go to: www.prettyflower.us/MysticalGold.html