

February's Channeled Reflection : Your Magical Moment!

Greetings! I am Teacher and I am so very pleased to come forth and speak with you, have a little chat as we have been calling our time together.

This month I would like to speak about something that you perhaps think as commonplace and that is your right to choose.

Perhaps you take such a right for granted, perhaps not. But this chat is about something different than a right to choose. More so, I would like to speak with you about choosing and upon what foundation you begin to move toward a choice, right or wrong, good or bad, freeing or the opposite. Ah! Here we go!

You are perhaps aware that most of us began this journey so very long ago, lifetimes ago, when we were living in what I'd like to call the magical moment. Now the magical moment is actually what happens when you are right in the moment and an idea comes to you. It sparks something, and the life force begins to flow and then what?

In the past, in the lifetimes ago, you also felt a movement... inside. The movement was the real you already participating with the great idea. Why? Why were you already participating with the great idea that came within the magical moment? Because, my dears, the idea and the movement occurred at the same exact moment. Think about that.

Today, something else occurs. When you have an idea, perhaps a great idea, there is a pause. What is the pause? It is your human nature trying to decide if it really is a good idea. You call this second guessing. And in living in today's world, perhaps second guessing is a good idea. But you are not living in today's world. Therein lies the crux of what we are talking about together.

You see, once you began the process of thinking about your grand idea, deciding how it might manifest if you followed through, you began something quite disabling. Now I am not placing blame upon anyone here. I am simply introducing you to a new concept, one that I believe will assist you in the next step that you make. It's this.

What do I mean by the words you are not living in today's world? You are actually living within the patterns of the past, patterns that determine how you will respond -- or react -- to that magical moment's great idea. Now thinking about things, trying to determine if an action will bring the best results, is one way of living, though not in today. Nothing wrong with all of that... except.

Here's the exception. If in the past, long ago, you resided in the moment, the very magical moment and an idea came to you and you were already taking action upon the idea simply because they both occurred in the same moment -- the idea and the taking action; then why not live in that manner today? Why not give it a try?

Easier said than done, you might say. Perhaps. But. What if you decided that you would like to give it a try. What if you decided that when an idea came to you, you would simply take the next right action, whatever it was. "But, how would I know what that action is?" you might ask. That's the next part of our chat.

Firstly we are together recognizing that long ago there was a way that really worked. In a magical moment, a great idea came to your consciousness and at the same time you were taking action upon the great idea.

Next, we together realize that today there are certain prohibitors to taking action right in the moment. They are... what? Wanting to be sure the action is correct, wanting to be sure the results will be what you want, and wanting to be sure you are not making a big mistake. Those are the prohibitors. And you have them for good reason. What is the reason? Fear.

Now fear is not shameful. Fear is not a bad thing. Yet in this circumstance, fear is a prohibitor, it stops your spontaneity and removes the magic.

Then the next question might be, how can I get rid of that fear. And right after you ask that question, you are asking, "What if my action really is not a good idea?" You see how strong that fear is? Where is it coming from? Oh you are going to like knowing this!

The fear is coming from your survival reactions. They served you well when you were asleep and struggling to find the light, to find the truth, to find your real self. But you have already done that -- to some extent anyway.

So what's the answer. How about this. How about you decide right here and right now that the next time you have a magical moment and an idea comes to you... you know, that idea that causes your heart to feel thrilled for seemingly no reason at all, that idea that excites you even though you don't know how to go about it. That idea. The next time that you have that magical moment, how about deciding right here and now that when that happens, you will take a deep breath and stay right there inside that feeling.

Now your mind is going to want to analyze the idea, but just set it aside, set aside thinking about the idea and stay right in the magic. You can even say those words to yourself, "I'll think about this later. Right now I am choosing to stay right in this magical moment with this great idea."

Then what. Some action will want to move you. It might be the action of writing down the idea. It might be the action of going for a walk. It might be the action of calling a friend who also has amazing magical moments.

Then. Let it go. Yes, I said let it go. You have written the great idea down. You have remained in the energy of the magic. And now you don't know what to do. That's because your system is trying to regenerate, trying to allow the old patterns, the old way of experiencing the action simultaneously with the receiving of the great idea. It will happen. You are simply allowing your system time... time to jump start, if you want to call it that.

The old way, the wonderful way that you resided within long ago might be saying, "What? What is that? Am I really called upon to be present... without hesitation? Oh, man. Here I come!" Something like that. And you are just letting that happen. You are not trying to figure out what is the best action because you really don't know.

That was the problem before when you tried to figure out if the results of taking the action would be the results that you would like. You see, therein lies the illusion. The you trying to figure that out is not the same you who has already taken the action and is allowing the result to be made manifest. You would have changed, do you see? So then all that figuring out is based on...nothing. Yes, truly, based on nothing.

Now you might argue that you simply had to figure out if a choice or decision was correct for you. But how did you know? Some of the craziest ideas have become grand inventions. Some of the out-of-norm writing has become a classic. And some of the daring to try anything, even if it failed or didn't result in a major discovery, led that person to dare to try again and again and all the while, the inner beingness was emerging and making truth known. Maybe that person became a great sage, or not. Does it matter? Do you see?

So then, when you allow the action of your inner knowing to float up to the surface, how does it present itself? Sometimes subtly, sometimes a knock on the door, and other times as a hint. Why? The pathway from within to without is being developed, a new way is forged, one that will deliver to you that simultaneous pulse beat. And that's what you are looking for, my dears. Simultaneous pulse beat. The one that sends that jolt of electricity to you with an idea, sparks joy and delight in your heart, causes you to say or shout, "Yes!", and then you find yourself taking an action. The action isn't connected to anything your mind might figure out. It is simply an automatic action. That is the treasure, my dears. It comes along with that magical moment. And now it is yours to have. You know the way.

Yes, this takes a little courage. I am asking you to dare, to dare to try something different. I am asking you to dare to regain what wasn't lost but was set aside during the old survival days. You are awake now. You know that there is something else going on, besides the cause and effect in the illusionary physical world. And perhaps you also know that the something else is very big and that you are a part of it.

Now it is time to take the action within being a part of the something else, the something big that is happening right this moment. The action is to dare to give this a try. You won't be sorry. Even if you stub your toe -- just a phrase -- you will have tried, you will have dared. Don't stop there! Dare again... and again... and again!

I, Teacher, will be with you in the magical moment... it's just waiting for you.
